

Best approach from the West Trapps parking lot: Route highlighted by white triangles. Distance: 3.2 miles elevation gain: 715 feet. From the West Trapps parking lot, hike to the Steel Bridge, follow the Trapps Road Carriageway to the Coxing Trail, then follow the Mcoxing Trail (blue) to the Millbrook Mountain Trail (red) to the Millbrook Mountain summit view. A faint unmarked trail leads down to the Westward Hal rappel tree. On the return trip, be careful not to miss the right hand turn (blue) for the Coxing Trail (fred) or you will end up at Lake Minnewska.

Use two $60\ {\rm meter}$ ropes to rappel from the Westward Ha! pine tree to the narrow traverse ledge above the 4th class cliff.

Westward Ha! 5.7 FA: 1962 Jim McCarthy, Harry Daley, Hans Kraus

Three possible starts with the center being the best line. A belay is possible at the top of the long left facing corner.

Cruise Control 5.9- FA: Rich Romano, Beau Hayworth Best done in two pitches.

Loose rock appears on all routes at Millbrook and appropriate skill and caution are advised. The average angle of the cliff is considerably steeper than the Trapps, increasing the level of commitment and making some sections barder than they look. Due to the long approach, alpine nature of the climbing, difficult retreats, and complicated rescue scenarios, climb as you would in a remote back-country location.
